printing, upcoming programs and more.

This month let's talk about the library as a community gathering space. People are tutored in academic and occupational goals in our upstairs rooms. Groups such as Brownie troops, quilters and ukulele players all meet in the library. Community organizations like the Newport Service Organization, the Jake Maxfield Connection, the Newport Historical Society and the organizers of Bringing the World to Newport meet in library meeting rooms. Library groups meet to knit, read poetry and talk about writing. Parents bring their children to story times, where the children enjoy early literacy activities and the parents enjoy much-needed time to visit with other parents.

The library is the site of happy occasions. Class reunions are planned in the Hale Room. People get married in the ballroom and later hold their baby showers there. Class pictures are taken on the library staircase. People use the library wifi throughout the building, read magazines in the Oval Room and play with their children in the picture book room.

The library is a place where everyone can express a point of view in a civil environment. Book groups often read books that cover controversial issues. Discussion occurs without name calling or raised voices. The library is a place where anyone can listen and be heard.

You can't drink your cup of coffee in the library but you also don't have to buy one to use library space.
