NEW COMPUTERS

Thanks to the Newport Rotary, who submitted a grant application to Rotary International, and to M.J. Harrington & Co., Lake Sunapee Bank, Sugar River Bank and the Newport Lions Club, we are replacing our four laptops with six new laptops along with two Chrome Books. These new computers will be up and running for public use by mid-November. This generous donation was made in addition to the donations for Maker Play that we wrote about in the October edition of our newsletter.

photography by the Library of Congress since the early 1900s. The library intends to make the photos available in their digital archives.

From 1994 to 2015, Dawson photographed 526 of the 16,536 public libraries in the United States, including the Richards Free Library. In his book, The Public Library: A Photographic Essay, Dawson used a photo of our children's room to introduce the chapter titled "Literature and Learning". The photograph is dated 1994 and depicts a woman and little boy. We would love to identify them. We invite you to come into the library and look at the book. If anyone knows the people on page 156, please let us know.

ROBOTS IN THE LIBRARY

This self building robot is another example of what we can do with the items in our Maker Play library.
